WOMAN LECTURER PRAISES WILSON

Miss Hosford Considers Democratic Presidential Candidate Marvelous Man.

DELIVERS A BIOGRAPHY

Is Guest of Honor With Governor Judson Harmon at Tabernacle.

Miss Hester E. Hosford, noted writer and lecturer, addressed a large gathering of Democrats at the Kenyon hotel last evening. Most of those at the meeting were women, who · formed an enthusiastic portion of the Miss Hosford's address was in the nature of an intimate character sketch of Woodrow Wilson, and not in any sense a discussion of the issues of the campaign. She has been an intimate friend of the Wilson family many years, and has written a biography of the presidential candidate.

She gave a biographical account of Governor Wilson, beginning with his Scotch-Irish ancestry. A standpat Republican of Atlanta who had known him as a boy, she said, told her that as a wouth he had keen perception and wisdom far beyond his years. She said this man had told her he was of the opinion that Wilson would make a great president.

Calls Work Marvelous.

Miss Hosford took up Governor Wil-son's college career, his work as a student at Princeton, in law school, in the practice of law, and as an advanced student at John Hopkins university. That he could have written a thesis on "Congressional Governa thesis on "Congressional Govern-ment" at the age of 29, and when he had never visited congress, a thesis

Miss Hosford was a guest at the Wilson home at the time the governor was nominated for president. She said that the press story that Governor Wilson was taking a bath when the news of his nomination reached him was inaccurate. As a matter of fact, she said, the Wilson family was at dinner at Sea Girt. The governor, she said, gave no visible sign of elation, and declared that the solemnity of the occasion affected him more deeply than occasion affected him more deeply than

Miss Hosford referred only briefly to Colonel Roosevelt. She said:

There are only two kinds of statesmen in this country. One kind is those who are for themselves first, last and all of the time. If any benefit might occur incidentily to the body politic, all well and good, but it is not the first object. The other type is very rare. It consists of those statesmen who are for the people first, last and all the time, and place all personal interests secondary to those of the body politic.

I didn't believe that Woodrow If I didn't believe that Woodrow Wilson was of this latter type, I wouldn't be here talking to you tonight. As governor of New Jersey he appealed to that which was highest, noblest and best in the assembly of New Jersey. If that did not accompilish the result, he threatened to go out in the legislative districts and whip the legislators in joint debate before their own constituents. That accomplished the result.

Will Uplift Roosevelt.

It is characteristic of Woodrow Wilson that he steadfastly refuses to sianderously assail his political opponents has has become the practice with other candidates in this campaign. It is said of Governor Wilson that he has reformed the Republican as well as the Democratic party in New Jersey. Therefore I say that if Governor Wilson is not elected president of the United States—which would be a miracle, for, of course, we all know he is going to be elected—if he reforms Theodore Roosevelt, he will have performed a signal service for the American people. Woodrowwill have performed a signal service for the American people. Woodrow-Wison will never descend to Theodore Roosevelt's standard. Rather will he bring Roosevelt up to his standard. In this day of unbridled and reckless political attacks, Governor Wilson's speeches are filled with refreshing and scholarly statesmanship. He has never been tempted to descend to personal attacks. The secret of his attitude lies in the purity of his moral vision. of his moral vision

With Governor Judson Harmon, Miss With Governor Judson Harmon, Miss Hosford was guest of bonor at a special organ recital at the tabernacle vesterday. At noon she was entertained by fifty Democratic women at the Commercial club with an elaborate luncheon. Governor Harmon called at the conclusion of the luncheon and Miss Hosford passed over the governor's career as a college professor and college president quickly, coming to his political career, dating from his nomination as governor of New Jersey two vesirs ago. She spoke at length of his triumph over James Smith, Jr., Democratic boss of New Jersey, as the achievement which will make him the next president of the United States.

That Wilson could have defeated a man whose political sagacity made him the biggest boss of any party in America, she regarded as one of the greatest victories for the people in the present age.

"There is a sort of sentiment connected with Utah that is stronger to me than anyone else. Twenty-five years ago I came through this state. I was then a young Cincinnati lawyer. Little did I dream that I would ever have the privilege of considering the application of this
